

For the sake of the poor

Liz Baddaley

Where are the hands that flung the stars in to the sky? Where is the voice that with one word spoke peace to the storm? Creator God, where are you now? Why does your earth groan and crack? Why does your hand not reach out to save for the sake of the poor? Where is the promise in the sky that the floods will cease? Where is the rain that must now fall on barren lands? Creator God, where are you now? Where is your love for those who fear? How do I square the truth I believe with the things that I see?
But I see your hands nailed down and stretched out wide, I hear your voice with an agonised pain still cry out loud: Father forgive
